

Take the Emotion out of Teaching

“Emotion cannot dictate teaching. Love must. Love is not an emotion, it’s a choice.”

-Leslie Rob

“Love is patient. Love is kind.” - I take time to learn my students.

“It does not envy, it does not boast, it is not proud. It does not dishonor others, it is not self-seeking.” - I no longer strive to prove my own merit, but help my students to see theirs.

“it is not easily angered, it keeps no record of wrongs.” - I stopped taking things personally, holding grudges and forgave. I give each student a new start with each new class.

“Love does not delight in evil but rejoices with the truth.” - I keep in mind that difficult students aren’t born difficult, that difficulty was birthed from something. I help them to find their true self.

“It always protects, always trusts, always hopes, always perseveres.” - I’m always there for them, but not to my detriment.
